Dear Members,

Greetings!

Firstly, a big thank you to our members and well-wishes who sent in your congratulatory messages to the Chamber's President, Mr Sanjeev Bajaj and the Vice-President, Mr Deepak Padaki, who were unanimously elected following the Chamber's 31st AGM in September 2020. Like you, I'm delighted on their appointment and you'd be pleased to hear that with the support of our Executive Council and Chapter Committees, we've made quick progress in realigning our top three strategic initiatives for members, that will be delivered over the next five months. As always, your input plays a key role and I must thank you for your regular feedback and for your participation in our online survey (key highlights on page 2) which has helped us understand your needs better.

Thank you for your patience on the Industry-sector Leadership Forums and I'm excited to say that we'll be initiating these soon. Before the end of this month,

Mr Sanjeev Bajaj, President

Chief Executive Officer – India

The basic value systems, democratic nature of governance and complimentary nature of the two economies make it easier for them to align amongst a variety of global dislocations. I am excited to be part of the leadership team of the chamber at this time and would endeavour to find appropriate ways to bring together the business to business and government to government efforts to get the best out of them to further the common agendas."

Mr. Deepak Padaki, Vice President

EVP, Strategy & Chief Risk Officer
Infosys Ltd

"The opportunity for increased collaboration between India and Australia has never been greater. The chamber is poised to play a significant role in fostering ties between businesses of the two nations. I am looking forward to being a part of the leadership team that steers this organization through its next phase of growth and influence."

Australian diplomats helping Australians return home

Australian diplomats across India (in Delhi, Chennai, Kolkata and Mumbai) have been hard at work helping thousands of Australian citizens and permanent residents return home to Australia from India since the COVID-19 lockdown was introduced in March.

As of 1 July, 8,209 people from India had returned to Australia on 38 flights – a mix of private charters, Australian Government-organised flights and Air India flights as part of the Indian Government's Vande Bharat mission. This pan-Indian effort included six flights (1,504 people) from Chennai, five flights (1,163 people) from Mumbai and one flight (73 people) from Kolkata.

The mammoth repatriation effort from India is the biggest the Australian Government has undertaken from any country. Australian diplomats worked long hours to ensure flights had the necessary approvals to land in Australia, passengers had clearance to cross state borders to reach departure points and that consular assistance was provided to the more vulnerable passengers.

The sheer volume of people wanting to get on these flights is testament to the strong people-to-people ties between Australia and India. From Punjab in the north to Kerala in the south, the Australia-India relationship lives vibrantly in all corners of India.

The flights were also a rare opportunity to see Qantas's flying kangaroo on Indian soil, including for the first time ever in Chennai. Stronger aviation links between Australia and India can be a great enabler of stronger trade, investment and people-to-people links in the post-COVID world. ❖

ECONOMIC RECOVERY

What opportunities in Australia may look like

When will the so-called economic recovery from Covid-19 pandemic start? We do not know. It is something we just cannot predict we have not experienced anything like this for over a century.

We are all currently in unknown territory with Covid-19 still rampant across India, Australia and most of the world.

In Australia, despite the lockdowns, business continues albeit with the assistance of some very strong and needed Government financial support. People movement dependent industries including travel, hospitality and some retail are effectively closed and may take years to recover.

On the upside and moving forward, there are a number of known truths:

- There will be massive pent up demand in the Australian economy, especially in the aforementioned industries.
- It will be an ideal time to promote Indian tourism and on the other side of the coin, Australian tourism.
- Australians have always been strong IT and tech users; with the current pandemic conditions this appetite has grown. There will be increased demand for IT related services and products.
- Australians, and as have many Indians found, can work successfully from home. There will be greater flexibility in the workforce, increasing demand on digital technologies and possibly a reduction in the demand for commercial office leasing.

- Our governments are only closely together and whilst a formal trade a formal trade agreement is a big way off, the spirit of cooperation is a great sign of things to come.
- When the Global Financial Crisis hit a decade ago, we found many foreign businesses were cashed up and looking for investment opportunities. We feel this may be the case when the pandemic subsides.
- Our capital markets have a strong upside and base. Read our article on this here.
- Australia will beat India (one day) in a test cricket series.

Seriously, we look forward to our economies being open to be able to enjoy our Cricket at the MCG and to be able to travel India and do business with our Indian friends.

My fellow Director David Lissauer and I were in India in early March and were astounded at the quality of innovation, products and services to which we were introduced. We look forward to the opportunity to work with these connections.

We are always pleased to answer your questions on daily business in Australia. ❖

The Quest Continues: Sustainable Ingredients

From humble beginnings to a global wellness brand, Swisse has always had a mission to inspire health and happiness around the world. We have been working hard as always to keep making millions healthier and happier, and continuing our mission to create a better future for both people and the planet. One of the fantastic and fascinating initiatives we have been investing in, is upping our sustainable ingredient game. To be able to marry up sourcing ingredients with our sustainability principles is an exciting step forward and the way of the future!

It’s estimated that up to 25% of apples are rejected before they reach retailers’ shelves, simply for cosmetic reasons such as being too big or too “ugly”. The majority of these apples typically end up in landfill.

Given that a large portion of the apples which go to waste are fine from a quality perspective, we are using ingredients sourced from these apples in our new Apple Cider Vinegar Tablets, thereby preventing a portion of the rejected fruits from going to landfill and tackling the ever-present issue of food-waste whilst maintaining our approach to using the best quality ingredients possible. ❖
